a model of popular science writing steven poole who was the first speaker and what was their first message an erudite tightly woven and beautifully written account of one of humanity s greatest mysteries the origins of language drawing on evidence from many fields including archaeology anthropology neurology and linguistics sverker johansson weaves these disparate threads together to show how our human ancestors evolved into language users the dawn of language provides a fascinating survey of how grammar came into being and the differences or similarities between languages spoken around the world before exploring how language eventually emerged in the very remote human past our intellectual and physiological changes through the process of evolution both have a bearing on our ability to acquire language but to what extent is the evolution of language dependent on genes or on environment how has language evolved further and how is it changing now in the process of globalisation and which aspects of language ensure that robots are not yet intelligent enough to reconstruct how language has evolved johansson s far reaching authoritative and research based approach to language is brought to life through dozens of astonishing examples both human and animal in a fascinatingly erudite and entertaining volume for anyone who has ever contemplated not just why we speak the way we do but why we speak at all translated from the swedish by frank perry in my long meditations on our past our present and our future i came to the following thought in a surprising and unexpected way if historians of yesteryear divided the historical time of humanity s past into two large temporal portions prehistory and history and they did so taking as a turning point the invention of writing by human beings for some time now in the year 2025 it seems that we are living a new turning point in which our humble writing and information in general are taking a quantum leap in appearance the time has come for us to name what is happening and that will be the history of man from our present time onwards and after much thought and consultation with artificial intelligence this is what i have called suprahistory if prehistory indicates a phase of lack non writing phase and history one of availability writing phase we can recognize there a sequence of advancement of progress that is to say of development now in our present day we are taking a astronomical leap in which not only will there be availability of writing but there will be hyper availability of creation and storage and not only of graphics but also of sound and images both static and moving currently all of this can be created edited and archived indefinitely always keeping in mind that technological instruments will be required to achieve this
