the passage from antiquity to the middle ages has been largely studied in the light of the thesis of a gradual transformation which is in contradiction of the previous assumption of an abrupt break due to war and general calamity perceiving war and the military reassesses this historical period of transition by an investigation of the contemporary world of thought that examines the impact and significance of a permanently increasing contact with warfare and armed violence her studies confirm the assumption of a gradual shift but they most of all show that the irrevocable end of the roman peace was a crucial factor in the late roman world becoming gradually medieval why some cities are more effective than others at reducing inequalities in the built environment for the first time in history most people live in cities one in seven are living in slums the most excluded parts of cities in which the basics of urban life including adequate housing accessible sanitation and reliable transportation are largely unavailable why are some cities more successful than others in reducing inequalities in the built environment in urban power benjamin bradlow explores this question examining the effectiveness of urban governance in two megacities in young democracies são paulo brazil and johannesburg south africa both cities came out of periods of authoritarian rule with similarly high inequalities and similar policy priorities to lower them and yet são paulo has been far more successful than johannesburg in improving access to basic urban goods bradlow examines the relationships between local government bureaucracies and urban social movements that have shaped these outcomes drawing on sixteen months of fieldwork in both cities including interviews with informants from government agencies political leadership social movements private developers bus companies and water and sanitation companies bradlow details the political and professional conflicts between and within movements governments private corporations and political parties he proposes a bold theoretical approach for a new global urban sociology that focuses on variations in the coordination of local governing power arguing that the concepts of embeddedness and cohesion explain processes of change that bridge external social mobilization and the internal coordinating capacity of local government to implement policy changes fair opportunity and responsibility lies at the intersection of moral psychology and criminal jurisprudence and analyzes responsibility and its relations to desert culpability excuse blame and punishment it links responsibility with the reactive attitudes but makes the justification of the reactive attitudes depend on a prior and independent conception of responsibility responsibility and excuse are inversely related an agent is responsible for misconduct if and only if it is not excused as a result we can study responsibility by understanding excuses we excuse misconduct when an agent's capacities or opportunities are significantly impaired because these capacities and opportunities are essential if agents are to have a fair opportunity to avoid wrongdoing this conception of excuse tells us that responsibility itself consists in agents having suitable cognitive and volitional capacities normative competence and a fair opportunity to exercise these capacities free from undue interference situational control because our reactive attitudes and practices presuppose the fair opportunity conception of responsibility this supports a predominantly retributive conception of blame and punishment that treats culpable wrongdoing as the desert basis of blame and punishment we can then apply the fair opportunity framework to assessing responsibility and excuse in circumstances of structural injustice situational influences in ordinary circumstances and in wartime insanity and psychopathy immaturity addiction and crimes of passion though fair opportunity has important implications for each issue treating them together allows us to explore common themes and appreciate the need to take partial responsibility and excuse seriously in our practices of blame and punishment
