the present work discusses the phenomenon of conservatism from a qualitative cultural psychological perspective as such the text breaks with current mainstream research about political ideologies wanting to assess a political culture within the simple administration of a questionnaire the springerbrief will oppose such a perspective trying to assess how the conservative minded person will structure space and time in peculiar ways in the first part of the study participants were invited to reflect about how they preserve or conserve meaning in various activities whereas the second part of the study tried to shed light onto how something preservable or conservable comes into being and what it actually makes it preservable here an autoethnographic study revealed that something becomes meaningfully preservable

when it satisfies multiple demands of the self as well as of the environment readers will realize the insufficiency of the positivistic attitude analyzing conservatism from a simple quantitative perspective and researchers are shown how political ideologies or cultures can be assessed ecologically something that has not yet been undertaken this leads to an appeal for scientists to study the phenomenon of conservatism more wholistically
