as science crafts detailed accounts of human nature what has become of the soul this collaborative project strives for greater consonance between contemporary science and christian faith outstanding scholars in biology genetics neuroscience cognitive science philosophy theology biblical studies and ethics join here to offer contemporary accounts of human nature consistent with christian teaching their central theme is a nondualistic account of the human person that does not consider the soul an entity separable from the body scientific statements about the physical nature of human beings are about exactly the same entity as are theological statements concerning the spiritual nature of human beings for all those interested in fundamental questions of human identity posed by the present context this volume will provide a fascinating and authoritative resource recent research in the philosophy of religion anthropology and philosophy of mind has prompted the need for a more integrated comprehensive and systematic theology of human nature this project constructively develops a theological accounting of human persons by drawing from a cartesian as a term of art model of anthropology which is motivated by a long tradition as was common among patristics medievals and reformed scholastics farris draws from philosophical resources to articulate christian doctrine as he approaches theological anthropology exploring a substance dualism model the author highlights relevant theological texts and passages of scripture arguing that this model accounts for doctrinal essentials concerning theological anthropology while farris is not explicitly interested in thorough critique of materialist ontology he notes some of the significant problems associated with it rather the present project is an attempt to revitalize the resources found in cartesianism by responding to some common worries associated with it
