during the past two decades there has emerged a growing need to reconsider the objects, axioms and perspectives of writing music history. A certain suspicion towards François Lyotard's grand narratives as a sign of what he diagnosed as our postmodern condition has become more or less an established and unquestioned point of departure among historians. This suspicion at its most extreme has led to a radical conclusion of the end of history in the work of postmodern scholars such as Jean Baudrillard and Francis Fukuyama. The contributors to critical music historiography take a step back and argue that the radical view of the impossibility of history as well as the unavoidable ideology of any history are counterproductive points of departure for historical scholarship. It is argued that metanarratives in history are still possible and welcome even if their limitations are acknowledged. Foucault, Lyotard and others should be taken into account but systematized viewpoints and methods for a more critical and multi-faceted re-evaluation of the past through research are needed. As to the metanarratives of music history they must avoid the pitfalls of evolutionism, hagiography and teleology, all hallmarks of traditional historiography. In this volume the contributors put these methods and principles into practice. The chapters tackle under-researched and non-conventional domains of music history as well as rethinking older historiographical concepts such as orientalism and nationalism and consequently introduce new concepts such as occidentalism and transnationalism. The volume is a challenging collection of work that stakes out a unique territory for itself among the growing body of work on critical music history.

Towards a twenty-first century feminist politics of music opens up a new way of thinking about the absence of women's music. It does not aim to find a solution in a liberal feminist sense but to discover new potentialities, new possibilities for thought and action. Sally MacArthur encourages us with the assistance of Deleuze and feminist Deleuzian work to begin the important work of imagining what else might be possible, not in order to provide answers but to open up the as-yet-unknown. The power of thought or what Deleuze calls the virtual opens up new possibilities. MacArthur suggests that the future for women's new music is not tied to the predictable and known but to futures beyond the already known. Previous research concludes that women's music is virtually absent from the concert hall and yet fails to find a way of changing this situation. MacArthur finds that the flaw in the recommendations flowing from past research is that it envisages the future from the standpoint of the present and it relies on a set of pre-determined goals. It thus replicates the present reality so reinforcing rather than changing the status quo. MacArthur challenges this thinking and argues that this repetitive way of thinking is stuck in the present, unable to move forward. This book sets out to develop a new conception of subjectivity that sows the seeds of a twenty-first century affirmative feminist politics of music.

This collection of syllabi reviewed and selected by a committee from the Society of Music Teacher Education (SMTE) offers a look at what is currently being taught in music education courses across the country.
