Everyone wants a relationship that lasts, yet nearly half of all today's parents split up. Harry and Kate Benson began their own married life with great expectations but within a few years they stood on the brink of divorce. Today their marriage is stronger than ever and they have helped many other struggling couples. So what changed in this ground-breaking book? Harry and Kate tell their own inspiring, hope-filled story set within the wider context of family research into what works. Harry and Kate's radical solution to strengthening families and reducing unnecessary family breakdown is simple: their research suggests a happy mum tends to mean a happy household. She is the lynchpin around whom the family rotates. So for most mums, the success of a marriage depends primarily on her husband's ability to make her feel valued. In other words: husband love your wife and she will love you right back. In that order, that's what mums want. That's the recipe for happy family life.

Evan Mok is getting married much to his family's surprise. Early in the pandemic, my longtime friend Jane Yin and I made a pact: if we were both single on her thirty-third birthday, we'd get engaged and plan a simple wedding. We were lonely, envious of people who weren't isolated in apartments by themselves. More than three years have passed and I'm ready. Even if I'm outgoing and optimistic on the outside, I've given up on romantic love and it'll be nice to build a life together with my friend. With both of our savings, we'll actually be able to afford a house. Jane also longs to be a part of a family and I can give her that. It'll be convenient and comfortable, but we won't have a physical relationship. It turns out that married life is just what I want it to be. We buy a place in the suburbs and eat dinner together every day. Neither of us is attracted to the other except... oh, hell. I'm definitely starting to wish I could share a bed with Jane and my feelings are much more complicated than I expected. Unfortunately, I doubt my serious perfect wife feels the same way and I don't
