man's dream of freedom inspires a valiant resistance against the Nazi war machine for ten years. 509 has been a political prisoner in a German concentration camp, persevering in the most hellish conditions. Deathly weak, he still has his wits about him and he senses that the end of the war is near. If he and the other living corpses in his barracks can hold on for liberation or force their own, then their suffering will not have been in vain. Now the SS who run the camp are ratcheting up the terror, but their expectations are jaded and their defenses are down. It is possible that the courageous yet terribly weak prisoners have just enough left in them to resist, and if they die fighting, they will die on their own terms, cheating the Nazis out of their devil's contract. The world has a great writer in Erich Maria Remarque: he is a craftsman of unquestionably first rank, a man who can bend language to his will. Whether he writes of men or of inanimate nature, his touch is sensitive, firm, and sure. The New York Times Book Review.

This book is a ground-breaking transnational study of representations of the environment in Asian American literature, extending and renewing Asian American studies and ecocriticism by drawing the two fields into deeper dialogue. It brings Asian American writers to the center of ecocritical studies. This collection demonstrates the distinctiveness of Asian American writers' positions on topics of major concern today: environmental justice, identity, and the land. War, environments, consumption, urban environments, and the environment and creativity are represented. Authors include Amy Tan, Maxine Hong Kingston, Ruth Ozeki, Ha Jin, Fae Myenne Ng, Le Ly Hayslip, Lan Cao, Mitsuye Yamada, Lawson Fusao Inada, Jeanne Wakatsuki Houston, Milton Murayama, Don Lee, and Hisaye Yamamoto. These writers provide a range of perspectives on the historical, social, psychological, economic, philosophical, and aesthetic responses of Asian Americans to the environment, conceived in relation to labor, racism, immigration, domesticity, global capitalism, relocation, pollution, violence, and religion. Contributors apply a diversity of critical frameworks, including critical race studies, counter-memory studies, ecofeminism, and geomantic criticism. The book presents a compelling and timely green perspective through which to understand key works of Asian American literature and leads the field of ecocriticism into neglected terrain.
