the covid 19 pandemic has hit human capital directly in europe and central asia adversely affecting both education and health school closures may lead to learning losses equivalent to a third to a full year of schooling and they are likely to exacerbate inequalities by disproportionately affecting students from disadvantaged backgrounds the disease has already killed thousands of people and some patients who survive will suffer long term damage to their health recovery from the pandemic will thus require strong investment in education and health this update examines human capital outcomes in the region and the ways in which the pandemic is likely to affect them a focus on the quality of tertiary education and health risk factors of obesity smoking and heavy drinking highlights the challenges that are particularly important for the region post covid 19 policy initiatives to improve education and health will need to recognize the challenges posed by increased reliance on remote learning and the importance of being prepared for future pandemics given the vulnerability of the region's aging societies and the large number of people with underlying health risks governments play a critical role in the economies of europe and central asia where government expenditures are close to 40 percent of gross domestic product and the public sector accounts for nearly 27 percent of total employment which is almost twice the global average the public sector often attracts some of the best educated workers in the region and support for a larger public sector is increasing due to aging populations and their growing health care and long term care needs rising inequality and greater support for redistribution and increasing expenditures as governments address the challenges posed by the covid 19 crisis the significant role that government plays underscores the importance of the quality of governance in determining productivity and growth and effectively responding to the region's economic and social challenges digital technology and the data revolution offer the potential to increase efficiency transparency responsiveness and citizen trust directly impacting the quality of government across the world the quality of government is increasingly informed by the extent to which governments harness digital tools and govtech to optimize management service delivery and overall state capacity technology and data are also key for fostering collaboration between governments and civil society to improve public sector efficiency and service delivery the covid 19 pandemic has highlighted the costs associated with delaying digitalization and govtech implementation and the opportunities that lie in public sector modernization handbook of human factors for automated connected and intelligent vehicles subject guide ergonomics human factors automobile crashes are the seventh leading cause of death worldwide resulting in over 1.25 million deaths yearly. Automated, connected, and intelligent vehicles have the potential to reduce crashes significantly while also reducing congestion, carbon emissions, and increasing accessibility. However, the transition could take decades. This new handbook serves a diverse community of stakeholders including human factors researchers, transportation engineers, regulatory agencies, automobile manufacturers, fleet operators, driving instructors, vulnerable road users, and special populations. It provides information about the human driver, other road users, and human-automation interaction in a single integrated compendium in order to ensure that automated, connected, and intelligent vehicles reach their full potential. Features addresses four major transportation challenges: crashes, congestion, carbon emissions, and accessibility from a human factors perspective. Discusses the role of the human operator relevant to the design, regulation, and evaluation of automated, connected, and intelligent vehicles. Offers a broad treatment of the critical issues and technological advances for the designing of transportation systems with the driver in mind. Presents an understanding of the human factors issues that are central to the public acceptance of these automated, connected, and intelligent vehicles. Leverages lessons from other domains in understanding human interactions with automation. Sets the stage for future research by defining the space of unexplored questions.

Growth in the developing East Asia and Pacific region slowed sharply in 2020Q1 because of the negative impact of the COVID-19 on economic activity. The decline has been broad-based, reflecting the interconnectedness of the EAP economies and reverberations from the global economy. As the virus turned into a pandemic, the COVID-19 outbreak followed an extended period of subdued growth in the region amid multiple external headwinds and heightened trade policy uncertainty. China and other regional economies have implemented monetary and fiscal policy measures to mitigate the negative impact of the outbreak. Growth in the East Asia and Pacific EAP region is projected to slow from 5.8 percent in 2019 to lower than expected 5.2 percent in 2020, reflecting the expected negative effects of the COVID-19 in this baseline scenario, which is subject to significant uncertainty. Growth in the region is expected to recover to 5.6 percent in 2021 as the impact of COVID-19 gradually dissipates. In the medium term, regional growth is expected to continue its downward trend, reflecting multiple structural headwinds. Policymakers should focus on designing economically efficient transmission control policies that consider both the marginal costs and the marginal benefits of preventive measures. Such policies would ideally be based on countries' preparedness and exposure, as well as economic circumstances. Targeted fiscal and monetary policies can help reduce the economic disruption caused by COVID-19 in the short term. In the medium term, there is a need to restore depleted buffers, address sources of financial instability, and invest in preventing and coping with infectious disease. Given the growing interdependence between EAP countries, coordinated policies and investments could increase resilience to shocks

World Bank economists expect GDP growth in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) to continue at a modest pace of 1.5 percent in 2019, slightly down from 1.6 percent in 2018. The decline reflects a contraction in one large economy which more than offsets growth in other countries. In the medium term, the World Bank expects real GDP in the MENA to grow at 3.4 percent and 2.7 percent in 2020 and 2021 respectively. The expected upswing is partially driven by ongoing policy reforms as well as reconstruction efforts in some countries. However, MENA's modest recovery will be insufficient to change its historically low growth in per capita GDP. External factors are unlikely to pull the region out of its low growth equilibrium. In addition, many countries in the region have persistent current account deficits. A recent deterioration in external balances across MENA constrained the region's ability to finance these deficits. Although the region has a low risk of experiencing sudden reversals in capital inflows in the short run, structural reforms capable of raising aggregate labor productivity are urgently needed to gradually reduce external imbalances. The report concludes by providing examples of reforms in fiscal policies, trade-related policies, social protection and labor markets, and state-owned enterprises (SOEs) in network industries.
