this book explores the shift in sociology away from the shared aspiration of the classical transition of transcending partiality through the construction of a science of society in the face of challenges to the notion of objectivity with the increasing subjugation of sociology to political ideologies and a growing emphasis on policy which casts sociology in the role of a provider of intellectual content for political programs this volume asks whether the situation is the result of an exhaustion of ideas or might perhaps be rooted in the failure in the very program of establishing sociology as a science taking seriously the challenges to the classical aspiration of constructing theories that both explain and are grounded in empirical reality the future of sociology asks whether the core idea of transcending ideology is still worth pursuing and whether there remains scope for making sociology scientific as such it will appeal to scholars and students of sociology social theory and social scientific methodology
