professionals it is said have no use for simple lists of virtues and vices the complexities and constraints of professional roles create peculiar moral demands on the people who occupy them and traits that are vices in ordinary life are praised as virtues in the context of professional roles should this disturb us or is it naive to presume that things should be otherwise taking medical and legal practice as key examples justin oakley and dean cocking develop a rigorous articulation and defence of virtue ethics contrasting it with other types of character based ethical theories and showing that it offers a promising new approach to the ethics of professional roles they provide insights into the central notions of professional detachment professional integrity and moral character in professional life and demonstrate how a virtue based approach can help us better understand what ethical professional client relationships would be like reforms and processes of change have become an increasingly pervasive characteristic of European Protestant churches in the last fifteen to twenty years driven by perceptions of crises such as declining membership rates dwindling finances decreasing participation in church rituals and less support of traditional church doctrine but also changes of governance of religion more generally many churches feel compelled to explore new forms of operations activities and organisational structures what is the inner dynamic and nature of these processes this book explores this question by applying perspectives from organisational studies and bringing them into dialogue with ecclesiological categories seeking to provide a richer understanding of the field of processes of change in churches among the questions asked are what are the implications organisationally and ecclesologically of viewing reform as a church practice and how does this relate to much more comprehensive waves of public sector reforms how is church leadership configured and exercised how is democratic leadership related to the authority of ordained ministry and how does leadership take on new forms in the context of churches and how do churches incorporate organisational practices of planned change and renewal such as social entrepreneurship
