this book explores the news media's coverage of indigenous settler reconciliation following the conclusion of the truth and reconciliation commission of Canada TRC using a comparative case study research design. The book examines news coverage of three significant indigenous rights issues and events during the post TRC era. The findings presented demonstrate that in the post TRC era the Canadian news media continue to produce systemic patterns in coverage which reject, marginalize and erase the territorial rights and claims of indigenous peoples. The author concludes that rather than helping to move the relationship between indigenous peoples and settlers forward along a path of reconciliation, power sharing and the resurgence of land-based self-determination, the news media are continuing to construct discourses and representations that work against the political objectives of indigenous peoples and reinforce settler colonial power relationships in Canada.
