scholars have written reams on the conquest of mexico from the grand designs of kings viceroys conquistadors and inquisitors to the myriad ways that indigenous peoples contested imperial authority but the actual work of establishing the spanish empire in mexico fell to a host of local agents magistrates bureaucrats parish priests ranchers miners sugar producers and many others who knew little and cared less about the goals of their superiors in mexico city and madrid through a case study of the province of michoacán in western mexico promiscuous power focuses on the prosaic agents of colonialism to offer a paradigm shifting view of the complexities of making empire at the ground level presenting rowdy raunchy and violent life histories from the archives martin austin nesvig reveals that the local colonizers of michoacán were primarily motivated by personal gain emboldened by the lack of oversight from the upper echelons of power and thoroughly committed to their own corporate memberships his findings challenge some of the most deeply held views of the spanish colonization of mexico including the black legend which asserts that the royal state and the institutional church colluded to produce a powerful catholicism that crushed heterodoxy punished cultural difference and ruined indigenous worlds instead nesvig finds that michoacán typical of many frontier provinces of the empire became a region of refuge from imperial and juridical control and formal catholicism where the ordinary rules of law jurisprudence and royal oversight collapsed in the entropy of decentralized rule this open access book explores a wide ranging discussion about the sociopolitical cultural and scientific ramifications of speciesism and world views that derive from it in this light it integrates subjects across the natural sciences social sciences and humanities the 21st century western world is anthropocentric to an extreme we adopt unreasonably self centered and self serving ideas and lifestyles americans consume more energy resources per person than most other nations on earth and have little concept of how human ecology and population biology interface with global sustainability we draw upon religion popular culture politics and technology to justify our views and actions yet remain self centered because our considerations rarely extend beyond our immediate interests stepping upward on the hierarchy from racism speciesism likewise refers to the view that unique natural kinds species exist and are an important structural element of biodiversity this ideology manifests in the cultural idea that humans are distinct from and intrinsically superior to other forms of life it further carries a plurality of implications for how we perceive ourselves in relation to nature how we view judeo christian religions and their tenets how we respond to scientific data about social problems such as climate change and how willing we are to change our actions in the face of evidence
