this literary critical study counters the usual tendency to segregate southern literature from african american literary studies noting that william faulkner and flannery o connor are classified as southern writers whereas zora neale hurston and richard wright are considered black authors timothy p caron argues for an integrated study of the south s literary culture he shows that the interaction of southern religion and race binds these four writers together caron broadens our understanding of southern literature to include both white and african american voices analyzing o connor s wise blood faulkner s light in august hurston s moose man of the mountain and wright s uncle tom s children caron shows that these writers share an intertwined concern for issues of race and religion these two significant components of southern culture form the intertextual network that binds together such seemingly disparate texts these authors not only interact among themselves in acknowledged and unacknowledged ways but also with the south's discursive practices most particularly caron sees common struggles over the word as he investigates how these writers use the bible in their understandings of race and religion in the american south while all four authors argue for the centrality of the bible in both the black and white southern experience each offers a different view of how this iconic text has shaped southern culture and its literature in this volume elizabeth phillips brings together scholarly essays on eschatology ethics and politics as well as a selection of sermons preached in the chapels of the university of cambridge arising from that scholarly work these essays and sermons explore themes ranging from ethnography to anabaptism and christian zionism to afro pessimism drawing on a wide range of authors from flannery o conner and herbert mccabe to james cone and m shawn copeland this collection provides insight into the fields of christian ethics and political theology as well as ethnography and homiletics phillips challenges theologians to interdisciplinarity in their work and to keep historical and traditional sources in conversation with contemporary sources from critical and liberative perspectives she challenges christians to engage in apocalyptic practices which name and resist the false pretenses of the political status quo and she challenges preachers to call their congregations to moral and political faithfulness opening up possibilities beyond both the squeamish evasion of politics in some preaching traditions and the didactic political partisanship of others
