this book is concerned with the meaning and use of two kinds of declarative sentences 1 it s raining 2 it s raining the difference between 1 and 2 is intonational 1 has a final rise indicated by the question mark while 2 ends with a fall christine gunlogson s central claim is that the meaning and use of both kinds of sentences must be understood in terms of the meaning of their defining formal elements namely declarative sentence type and rising versus falling intonation gunlogson supports that claim through an investigation of the use of declaratives as questions on one hand gunlogson demonstrates that rising and falling declaratives share an aspect of conventional meaning attributable to their declarative form distinguishing them both from the corresponding polar interrogative is it raining and constraining their use as questions on the other hand since 1 and 2 constitute a minimal pair differing only in intonation systematic differences in character and function between them in particular the relative naturalness of 1 as a question compared to 2 must be located in the contrast between the fall and the rise to account for these two sets of differences gunlogson gives a compositional account of rising and falling declaratives under which declarative form expresses commitment to the propositional content of the declarative rising versus falling intonation on declaratives is responsible for attribution of the commitment to the addressee versus the speaker respectively the result is an inherent contextual bias associated with declaratives which constitutes the crucial point of difference with interrogatives the compositional analysis is implemented in the framework of context update semantics heim 1982 and others using an articulated version of the common ground stalnaker 1978 that distinguishes the commitments of the individual discourse participants restrictions on the use of declaratives as questions as well as differences between rising and falling declaratives as questions are shown to follow from this account gunlogson argues that neither rising nor falling declaratives are inherently questioning rather the questioning function of declaratives arises through the interaction of sentence type intonation and context this book proposes a new solution to the problem of vagueness there are several different ways of addressing this problem and no clear agreement on which one is correct the author proposes that it should be understood as the problem of explaining vague predicates in a way that systematizes six intuitions about the phenomenon and satisfies three criteria of adequacy for an ideal theory of vagueness the third criterion which is called the criterion of precisification is the most controversial one it is based on the intuition that a predicate is vague only if it is imprecise the author considers some different definitions of linguistic imprecision proposing that a predicate is imprecise if and only if there is no sharp boundary between objects to which its application yields some particular truth value and objects to which its application does not yield that truth value the volume critically reviews the current theories of vagueness and proposes a new one the theory of vagueness as arbitrariness which defines a vague predicate as an arbitrary predicate that must be precisified in order to contribute to a sentence that has truth conditions the main advantages of this theory over the current alternatives are that it satisfies all three criteria and systematizes the relevant intuitions
