doing the right thing sometimes difficult but always correct contains fourteen scenarios and solutions the scenarios are real life situations the author had to deal with as a principal and superintendent doing the right thing is sometimes challenging but always correct each unique scenario is followed by questions that the reader or small groups should consider in a college university graduate leadership course these challenging scenarios will require discussions that will differ among each group member or individual and be shared by each group or individual the solution section describes what the author did with each scenario and identifies the applicable professional standards for educational leaders for that scenario in the author s nine years of teaching at the university of northern iowa coordinating the superintendent preparation program and teaching in the principal s licensure program he found that just teaching theory and concepts needed to be combined with real world experiences to mean something to future leaders doing the right thing ethics in science by the editors of scientific american most of us have probably had those discussions either in a classroom setting or otherwise where a hypothetical situation is given and you're asked to choose between two or more unsatisfying options if you follow option a five people die if you follow option b one person dies what do you do option b looks like the lesser of the evils but then there's a wrinkle option b requires you to actively murder the one person to save five now what do you do making ethical decisions involves more than listening to an inner moral compass a feeling in the gut of what's right and wrong and questions of ethics in science are becoming increasingly complex especially as technology encroaches upon even our most private cellular spaces in this ebook doing the right thing ethics in science we cover a wide range of areas in science and medicine where complicated ethical questions come to bear beginning with the first section genomics in are personal genome scans medically useless sally lehrman examines the value or lack thereof in the information obtained from direct to consumer genotyping tests a field that exploded in the 00s the middle sections are devoted to ethics in research where informed and ethically sound choices are the basis of many scientific studies sections 2 3 and 4 analyze the challenges unique to three areas respectively medical pharmaceutical and basic research medical studies often reveal more information than researchers are looking for and two articles the ethics of scan and tell and reporting unrelated findings in study subjects examine questions of responsibility toward study subjects later charles seife ferrets out doctors financial ties to pharmaceutical companies in is drug research trustworthy and katherine harmon calculates the cost of misconduct to the taxpayer finally section 6 ethics and the mind analyzes the process of how we resolve moral conflicts when we make decisions the interaction between reasoning and emotion is poorly understood as seen in both anguish and ethics and when morality is hard to like but studies show that the emotional and memory regions of the brain are more active when confronted with difficult moral questions these decisions are usually made after great inner struggle think again of option b what would you do a sympathetic examination of the failure of anti corruption efforts in contemporary indonesia combining ethnographic fieldwork in the city of kupang with an acute historical sensibility sylvia tidey shows how good governance initiatives paradoxically perpetuate civil service corruption while also facilitating the emergence of new forms of it importing critical insights from the anthropology of ethics to the burgeoning anthropology of corruption tidey exposes enduring developmentalist fallacies that treat corruption as endemic to non western subjects in practice it is often indistinguishable from the ethics of care and exchange as indonesian civil servants make worthwhile lives for themselves and their families this book will be a vital text for anthropologists and other social scientists particularly scholars of global studies development studies and southeast asia
