this book was born from curiosity to begin with it was the curiosity of an economist who studied in the 60 s in an environment which has subsequently developed from national into global economics who has to recognize that politicians scholars and large segments of society oblivious to supranational authorities and economic globalization forces continue to labour under the notion that they are still fully autonomous and sovereign when shaping national economic policy and pretend as though their own national state were still the master in its own house that despite unbridled market economics could continue to dictate to the economy and companies how to live and in which rooms all that has become fiction the laws of globalization diminish the manoeuvring space for shaping national economic policy even if many folks today don't want to hear it the issue is no longer achieving what is socially politically desirable for the own society but rather the optimal adaptation of society and social benefits to the politically practicable raising the average human lifespan by a decade or more will change our world the future is not about whether this will happen it is about what we should do when it happens even the most pessimistic assertions about the future of our environment are underestimating the extent of the problem there is simply no model in which more years of life does not equate to more people and in which that does not lead to more crowding environmental degradation more consumption and more waste hence as we prolong life these environmental crises will be further exacerbated with current diets and production practices feeding 7.6 billion people is degrading terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems depleting water resources and driving climate changes the challenges of today are not just population and it's not just consumption it is waste also thanks to things such as cars planes big homes deforestation and so forth the annual carbon dioxide emissions of an average are three times as high as it should be it is likely that this signals that the current level of dividends is unsustainable hence we use and return little of value to our natural world in our book we address the questions related to environmental health challenges that include contamination of air water and soil and car transportation in order to better understand natural industrial and social environmental hazards we have to think of them in a broader context i.e. physical chemical biological and cultural we hope that the presented publication gives the reader a broader perspective on the issues related to environmental health challenges in contemporary society in the coming years
